

El Paso Welcomes the Cattlemen

THE CATTLEMEN are welcome. But the cattlemen are so much a part of El Paso that even to extend them a welcome when they gather here for a convention is like telling a man he is welcome in his own house.

The cattlemen have always been identified with El Paso. They made it possible for El Paso to be. The cattlemen were the pioneers who opened up this great southwestern country. After them came the railroads, the farmers and the rest of civilization.

But for the cattlemen, pushing always onward, ahead of the rush of the agriculturists, the west would not have been opened and El Paso would not have been a city.

Hunting a range for his stock, the cattlemen pushed on, carrying civilization with him. He had few of the necessities and none of the comforts of life at that time, but he made it possible for these things to follow. He has lived to reap the fruits of his pioneering, however, for the cattlemen are today still the leading man of this great western country.

His herds may not be as large as they once were, but his cattle bring a better price and are of a higher grade. Fewer cattle now mean the same in money, and his troubles in raising them, herding them and marketing them are infinitesimal as compared with the days when there were no fences west of San Antonio, and no railroads south of St. Joe.

The cattlemen have branched out, broadened and developed with the growth of the country which he opened to civilization. He is now interested in banking, mercantile pursuits, railroads and, as a matter of fact, wherever there is an undertaking of general interest to and for the general welfare of a community, the cattlemen are prominently in the undertaking, if not the leader. Cattlemen like to be called, for "once a cattlemen, always a cattlemen," but the cattlemen today are interested in many other things than cattle; he is a leading citizen of whatever community he lives in, and as in the days when he led in the advance guard of civilization, opening up a country that has since become an empire—he still remains in the forefront.

The cattlemen are El Paso's kind of people, and El Paso is the cattlemen's kind of town. Both are carefree, energetic, never satisfied to be anywhere except in the front, and they belong to each other. The cattlemen were here before El Paso, they have been here with El Paso during all its years of growth, they are here now. They belong here. The Herald extends the welcome on behalf of El Paso, and it does it with a heart full of gladness because they are here and full of thankfulness because of what they have contributed to the success and the prosperity of El Paso and all the west.

Welcome pioneers, country builders, city makers and civilizers—Cattlemen.

Vote For A Greater and Better City

NEW DEAL all around—that is what the "Citizens' ticket" means. The Citizens' ticket does not represent an "anti" program. The Citizens' ticket is the expression of a positive, aggressive, constructive movement toward city betterment, and does not propose to shout "against" this thing or that thing, but to work "for" everything that makes for the benefit and greatness of El Paso. The candidates for mayor and council are all clean men, of highest personal standing in the community.

They are all large taxpayers.

They have all been conspicuously successful in their private business.

They have all been large employers and friends of labor.

They are all men of family.

They are all "old timers."

They are all well known by act and reputation as men who stand for the best things.

They have all been active in city betterment.

They are all men of sterling integrity.

They are all men of decent lives and right instincts.

Not one of them has been active politically.

They are all business men and good citizens whose first thought and whose only motive in consenting to go before the people as candidates is to serve the community in which they have spent many years and in which all their worldly possessions are invested.

What more can the honest, conscientious citizen, earnestly desirous of the best for his city, ask for in a body of candidates for municipal office, than the possession of such qualifications as those just outlined?

The Citizens' ticket stands for economy and efficiency in public service;

For publicity of all governmental matters;

For strict auditing and accounting of all departments, including the water works;

For the merit system in the civil service, including the police and fire departments;

For equitable taxation;

For a clean ballot;

For the protection of our boys and girls from evil influences in city life as far as possible;

For enforcement of laws against public vice;

For enforcement of the laws against public gambling;

For enforcement of the laws regulating the sale of liquor and habit forming drugs;

For improvement of streets and sidewalks;

For open bidding on contracts for public work;

For extending the city's parks and parkways;

For thorough sanitation, and conservation of the public health, including Chihuahuas and including babies;

For fair treatment to the Mexican population;

For general improvement of conditions of living throughout Chihuahuita;

For systemizing public charity and relief work, in the direction of greater efficiency, greater economy, and wider usefulness;

For effective regulation of all public utilities in the direction of better public service;

For abating all nuisances;

For an end to the alliances that aim to promote the interests of one section and hinder another;

For wider facilities for public education and public recreation;

For greater safety of citizens and their property;

For improving conditions of labor;

For cheaper water service to the public, to be made possible by greater economy and efficiency of operation and more equitable distribution of the burden of maintaining the supply;

For a well lighted city;

For a clean city (all the city, not merely the business center);

For a beautiful and comfortable city;

For legitimate promotion of new industries and new railroads;

For promoting more cordial international relations;

For a City Plan for the future, that shall lay the foundation for the great city that is to be;

For modern methods in municipal government;

For business methods in all things;

For the Open Door to greater opportunities;

For strict accountability to the people in all details of city management;

For divorcement of the old alliance between city political control and law-breakers;

For new blood and a new spirit;

For high ideals of what a city ought to be;

For unselfish public service;

For ending the reign of favoritism;

For free discussion and full public participation in government;

For full recognition of the principle that the executive and legislative officers of the city represent all the people, and not one faction.

Such is the program on which the Citizens' ticket is presented to the people. Election day is exactly three weeks from today. Every vote will be needed. Every man and woman believing that the Citizens' ticket should be elected must contribute personal work in order to make success sure. Not an opportunity to drive the movement forward should be overlooked. Victory for the Citizens' ticket will mean a new El Paso.

On the Citizens' ticket, from top to bottom, there is not one man who needs to be apologized for, not one man with anything in his record that needs to be explained away.

Robert Bruce

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Slivash."

ROBERT BRUCE, who was about as much Scotchman as has ever been gotten together under one kilt and tartan, was born in 1274 and is still very well remembered on both sides of the Scottish border.

Bruce was a huge man with massive arms and red legs and was a very handy man in battle, being considerably more fatal than smelter. His time in Scotland was doing a precarious business as an independent kingdom and when Bruce, who had a life job as Earl of Carrick, was asked to swear fealty to the English king, Edward I, it ground his proud spirit until he could not enjoy his oatmeal. He stood it for ten years, after which he went back to Scotland, rallied his men around him and asked for the Scottish crown, which had been kept locked in a safety deposit vault for years, because no one dared to wear it. Placing the crown on his head, Bruce waded into the English, and an enjoyable time was had after the custom of those days.

Twice Bruce was defeated and chased over the hills with great vigor. The last time he retired to an island for a year to get his breath and sew up the arrow holes in his kilt. In the spring of 1307 he came out again, and he had a small band of men behind him and took the lid off of Scotland.

The Sins of the Man

All Are Blamed On the Woman;
Man, However, Keeps Woman;
By Chas. H. Parkhurst

WE have had a great deal said and written lately about fallen women. It seems as though it were time to turn the leaf and write on it something about fallen men.

Putting the emphasis of criminality on the female sex lacks both justice and gallantry. The trick is a mean one and goes back to the time of our first parents when Adam wanted forbidden fruit as much as Eve did, but had not the courage of his depravity, and let Eve sin first, so as to give him something on which he could base an apology, and say, "Lord, the woman whom Thou gavest me."

The animal impulse is stronger in man than in the woman, and women would not, except in exceptional instances, be sinners in the vice were it not for man's beastly impulse and for his willingness to say the woman for enabling him to gratify himself.

Were it the case that the moving passion was in the woman, then it would be the woman that would pay the mar and not the man that would pay the woman. This is an element in the present situation that ought not to be neglected.

Male Sex Posters Opinion.

The fundamental difficulty lies in the fact that the male sex, being the more aggressive of the two, has been alert to foster the opinion that it is wrong for a woman to be bad, but it is not for a man to be so, and that while a man can be respectable and still sin every week in the year, a woman cannot be so, and must be ostracized and socially damned. That is quite in keeping with the species of justice and gallantry already mentioned.

I am told of an instance occurring less than a week ago where a woman, who was a member of the El Paso Herald, was asked to give a testimonial for a man for soliciting. The blue-clothed guardian of public peace and morals treated the request as a good joke.

Why arrest a woman for soliciting and not arrest a man for the same offense?

Why not have retreats for fallen men? "Doors of hope" for fallen men?

It is made that suggestion to a man the other evening and after he had had time to recover his breath he answered: "What a lot of time it would take."

There are three causes to which is to be attributed the wide prevalence of the social evil; first, licentiousness, inadequate wages paid to girls and female passion for them; second, the lure of the city; and third, the influence of the three male licentiousness.

"CUBIST" GOWN IS LATEST
Chicago, Ill., March 18.—The "Cubist" gown will be the proper conceit in women's dress this spring, according to information imparted by a member of the Chicago Dressmakers' club.

One woman said a front view of the new gown reminded her somewhat of the futurist painting "Nude Descending a Stairway," which recently was shown at the international exhibition of modern art in New York.

To Woodrow

By WALT MASON.

You're now in the office to which you aspired, you're sitting in grandeur in Washington's chair; you have all the glory you ever desired, all flavored with labor and seasoned with care; that chair is a higher and better thing than any old throne that a monarch sat on; you look over the head of the average king, and how do you like it as far as you've gone? You're now getting wise to the millions of bores who want an appointment to this or to that; they tap at your windows and knock at your doors, and you, with longing to hammer them flat, they request the porch and they hide in the hall, and wearily wait by the day on the lawn; they'll never depart till you've talked with them all, and how do you like it as far as you've gone? Perhaps you have found that the glory is slim, when weighed with the "roulets that burden your mind; you can't have a friend but he's pulling your limb, you can't have a foe but he stabs you behind; you can't have an hour that is truly your own, you cannot escape from old grief and her spawn; you can't sing a song but it turns to a moan, and how do you like it as far as you've gone?

UNION CARPENTERS MAY STRIKE APRIL 1

Demand is Made for Increase in Pay From 55 to 62 1-2 Cents An Hour After April 1.

Unless the local contractors agree to a raise from 55 cents to 62 1-2 cents an hour, on April 1, every union carpenter will lay down his tools and refuse to work. Notice to this effect, according to Otto Kroeger, one of the contractors, has been served on the contractors by the local carpenters' union.

Union carpenters say the notice referred to by Mr. Kroeger was served some time ago and that some of the local contractors already have agreed to its terms. They also say that work started before the demand was made, and remaining unfinished, will be finished at the old scale of prices.

One of the nine counts charges the "misapplication" of $115,000 of the bank's money through alleged illegal loans to the Ford & Johnson Chair company now in the hands of receivers.

C. J. Priest, of San Antonio, Texas, lost his watch at the Paso del Norte hotel Monday night. He was standing in the lobby just inside the El Paso street entrance, when a stranger took it by the shoulders and then brushed by. The stranger disappeared and so did Priest's watch.

He was held in $2500 bond, which he failed to provide, and was sent to jail.

ATTEMPTING TO SECURE RECOGNITION FOR HUERTA

Washington, D. C., March 18.—Juan Ochoa Ramos, a wealthy Mexican, a close friend of Felix Diaz, is here to try to secure the United States recognition of the Diaz-Huerta government. Senator Ramos has been seen by president Wilson and secretary Bryan. He has been in Washington several days.

Sen. Ramos has considerable interests in the United States and is an immense land owner in his own country. It is understood that he told president Wilson and Mr. Bryan that Huerta was exerting his influence to restore tranquility in Mexico and that the recognition of his authority by this government would be a considerable aid in securing permanent peace.

MEXICAN FEDERALS AT NOGALES TO BE HELD

Washington, D. C., March 18.—Secretary of War Garrison has instructed Brig.-Gen. Bliss to hold the arms and equipment of the Mexican federal soldiers who are being routed by the rebels from Nogales, Mex., and to the boundary to Nogales, Ariz., and to the United States. It has been thought necessary to keep the fugitive soldiers under guard chiefly because of the importance of keeping them from falling into the hands of the rebels and locating their camp at a reasonable distance from the international line.

STOCKS RECORD NEW LOW PRICES

Discrimination Against Industrial Issues in Loans Affects Market.

New York, N. Y., March 18.—There was a further decline of industrial shares on the stock market today owing to discrimination against them in loans. The market was generally weak, especially in the case of them. Low record prices were made in some instances and there was little indication of inside support.

Important stocks, after some hesitation, responded to short covering due to the belief that the list was thoroughly liquidated. Bear traders were impressed by the stability of the leading issues and the renewed selling of minor stocks.

Bonds were irregular.

The market closed weak. Standard stocks took a commanding position in the market during the final hour. Pressure was put on the market by the selling of the last named dropped to 144 1/4, a new low record.
